Instructions

For small groups

The players sit in a circle and choose someone to roll all nine dice. They then work together to tell a story using all the images that have been rolled. This can be repeated until every player has had a turn. Afterwards, they can discuss which story was the best and why.

For larger groups

The players sit in a circle. A dice is handed to one player, who will be the first narrator. The story begins with the dice that has been handed out. The narrator starts a sentence using the image shown on the dice. Further dice are then handed out to the other players. They take turns rolling the dice and continue the story using the images shown on their dice. The dice are passed around until every player has had a turn or the story reaches a logical conclusion.
